Section 9. Threatened and Endangered Species

- 1. Bull Trout
Under mandates of the Endangered Species Act, the US Fish and Wildlife Service listed bull trout as threatened in nearly all-northern Idaho Waters. Today, bull trout are found primarily in upper-elevation streams. Spawning, egg incubation, and early rearing of bull trout are confined to upper-elevation streams. Large rivers and lakes provide habitat for migration and adult rearing. Declines in population numbers and habitat have been attributed to overharvest, competition and hybridization with introduced species, construction of barriers, and degradation of habitat.

Under the Coeur d'Alene Tribe's Authority to set fishing rules, the Coeur d'Alene Tribe has closed all bull trout harvest on the Reservation.

- a. Know the difference
The ability to identify bull trout and closely related species is important in rebuilding the Reservation's bull trout population. In most streams and lakes, the Fish and Wildlife Program encourages anglers to keep brook trout by offering a bag limit of 25 in addition to the normal trout limit.

Brook and bull trout look alike to many anglers. However, there are two easily recognizable differences:

- 1. Brook trout have spots or marks on the dorsal (top) fin, and they have three colors in the lower fins (a white leading edge, followed by a black band, and an orangeish color in the rest of the fin).
- 2. Bull trout have no spots in the dorsal fin, and only two colors on the lower fins (no black band)
